Question 2. One U.S. dollar is comparable to 131 Japanese yen according to the finance news report yesterday.

- A. entitled
- B. compatible
- C. compact
- D. equal

Read the passage carefully, then mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answers.

Champagne, the king of wines and wine of kings, tastes all the better when it is drunk from an elegant, fine-quality glass. That, however, is only one of thousands of ways glass is used today. And for all those different uses, many different types of glass are produced. Glass products are manufactured in different ways. Today, glass is blown by hand in the traditional way which the Roman first developed, but now this work is done by robots, too. Generally, in industry, much faster methods of mass production are needed. Often, for example, glass is pressed into the necessary shape by machine. Glass is shaped in other ways too. For example, it is made into long, very thin fibres. Fibres like these are required to make the fibre-optic cables that help to build the information Super-Highway around the world.

Question 3. It can be inferred from the passage that .....

- A. the traditional way of blowing glass by hand is still in use today.
- B. the Romans first developed methods of mass production.
- C. today the blowing of glass is all done by robots.
- D. the traditional way is no longer in use today.

Question 4. According to the passage, which of the following is correct?

- A. Mass production of glass is done by robots.
- B. Both C and D.
- C. In industry glass is often shaped by machine.
- D. Glass can be shaped in many different ways.

Question 5. The passage primarily discusses

- A. champagne, a kind of wine.
- B. the types of glass products.
- C. the uses of glass.
- D. the ways of making glass.

Question 6. The phrase "the king of wines and wine of kings" means.....

- A. Champagne is the best wine and is made for kings.
- B. Champagne is the best wine made by kings.
- C. Champagne is the king that drinks lots of wine.
- D. Champagne is the best wine of kings.

Question 7. According to the passage,.....

- A. today glass is used in one thousand different ways.
- B. the only way glass is used today is for drinking wine.

WORKING MOTHERS

Reliable studies have shown that the children of working mothers have no more problems than children whose mothers stay at home. My personal view is that mothers should work if they wish.

Some women have invested so much in a career that they cannot __ (10) __ to give it up. Others have to work because of economic necessity, and there are also those who are simply not __ (11) __ out to be full-time parents.

There appear to be several options when it comes to choosing child care. These range from child minders through to granny or the kind lady across the street __ (12) __ however, many parents don't have any choice; they have to accept anything they can get.

__ (13) __ how good the available childcare may be, some children protest if their parents are not around. This is a perfectly normal stage in a child's development. Babies over the age of six months become dependent on mum and close family members, so make sure that you allow __ (14) __ time to help your child settle in.

And don't forget: if you want to do the best for your children, it's not the quantity of time you spend with them, it's the quality that matters.

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions

Hibernation is typically linked to seasonal changes that limit food supplies. It is identified by metabolic suppression, a drop in body temperature and torpor- a sleep- like state- interspersed with brief bouts of wakefulness. Though certain species of fish, amphibians, birds and reptiles are known to lie dormant during cold winter months, hibernation is generally associated with mammals, according to Don Wilson, a curator emeritus of vertebrate zoology at the Smithsonian National Museum of Natural History.

Endothermic mammals- “ warm- blooded” animals that generate body heat internally- need a constant energy source to keep their engines running, Wilson told Live Science. And when that energy source becomes difficult to find, hibernation can help them weather harsh conditions.

“During times of the year when that energy source is missing- especially in northern climates- one coping mechanism is to just shut down,” he said. “ They’ll feed heavily during the few months when food is plentiful and build up fat, then go to sleep and live off their fat reserves”.

A special type of fat called “ brown fat” accumulates in hibernating mammals, Wilson said. Bats that hibernate develop brown fat on their backs between their shoulder blades, but mammals can also store brown fat in their bellies and elsewhere in their bodies, Wilson said.

Brown fat goes a long way because the hibernating animals draws on it very slowly, reducing their metabolism to as little as 2 percent of their normal rate, according to a 2007 study published in the Journal of Neurochemistry.

Their core body temperature is also greatly reduced. It generally hovers close to the air temperature in the animal’s den but can sometimes fall as low as 27 degrees Fahrenheit ( minus 3 degrees Celcius) in Arctic ground squirrels, according to Kelly Drew, a neurochemist and professor with the Institute of Artic Biology at the University of Alaska Fairbanks.

Arctic ground squirrels’ bouts or torpor last about two or three weeks, Drew told Live Science, and the animals rouse “ pretty consistently” for about 12 to 24 hours, before resuming their winter sleep. They repeat this process for up to eight months.

But even though Arctic squirrels maintain a lower body temperature than any other hibernating mammal, the changes in their bodies overall aren’t that different from those that occur in other hibernating mammals, Drew said.

“ The quality of mammalian hibernation is similar from bears to hamsters to ground squirrels,” Drew said. “ The distinguishing feature is how cold they get”.
