The day after Thanksgiving is the start of the holiday shopping season. Thanksgiving is always on a Thursday, so the day after is a Friday. This day has come to be known as Black Friday. It has been the busiest shopping day of the year since 2005.

Most stores offer great deals on Black Friday. They open their doors in the wee hours of the morning. They try to attract shoppers with big discounts. Some items like TVs are much cheaper than usual. Stores may even lose money on these items. They hope that shoppers will buy gifts for other people while they are in the store.

Black Friday is a great time to get good deals. The problem is that there are not enough low-priced items to go around. Each store may only have a few. These items are in high demand. People stand in long lines to get such great deals. They may line up hours before a store opens. They may be hoping to get a low price on a TV or laptop, but not everyone who wants one will get one. Some people leave disappointed. The situation can be tense. Some Black Friday events have been violent. Large, eager crowds have trampled workers. Fights have broken out or people have been cutting in line. People have shot one another over parking spots. But most Black Friday events are safe and fun. Still, if you plan on going, expect large crowds and a bit of shoving.

Câu 39: According to the text, why do stores set prices so low on so they lose money?

- A. They want people to enjoy the holidays.
- B. They hope people will buy other gifts while they are in the store.
- C. They are in a giving mood because the holiday season is just beginning.
- D. They are trying to get rid of old items from last year to make room for new items.

Câu 40: Which is NOT true about Black Friday?

- A. Black Friday is always the day after Thanksgiving.
- B. Black Friday has been a little dangerous and uncomfortable.
- C. Black Friday is the busiest shopping day of the year.
- D. Black Friday is a national holiday.

Câu 41: Which best explains the main idea of the third paragraph?

- A. Black Friday is the best time of the year to get good deals.
- B. Black Friday is a really disappointing time of the year.
- C. People stand in long lines on Black Friday.
- D. Black Friday deals are limited and not everyone will get one.

Câu 42: The word "trampled" in paragraph 3 mostly means _____

- A. run over

- D. to help us know about the origin of Black Friday

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions from 44 to 50 .

Social networking sites like Facebook and MySpace do not help you make more genuine close friends, according to a survey by researchers who studied how the websites are changing the nature of friendship networks. Although social networking on the internet helps people to collect hundreds or even thousands of acquaintances, the researchers believe that face to face contact is nearly always necessary to form truly close friendships.

"Although the numbers of friends people have on these sites can be massive, the actual number of close friends is approximately the same in the face to face real world," said Will Reader at Sheffield Hallam University. Social networking websites such as Facebook, Bebo and MySpace have taken off rapidly in recent years. Facebook was launched initially in 2004 for Harvard University members but has since expanded to over 34m users worldwide. MySpace, which was set up in 2003, has over 200m users and was bought by Rupert Murdoch's News Corporation in 2005 for $580m.

Previous research has suggested that a person's conventional friendship group consists of around 150 people, with five very close friends but larger numbers of people who we keep in touch with less regularly. This figure is so consistent that scientists have suggested it is determined by the cognitive constraints of keeping up with large numbers of people. But Dr Reader and his team have found that social networking sites do allow people to stretch this figure. The team asked over 200 people to fill in questionnaires about their online networking, asking for example how many online friends they had, how many of these were close friends and how many they had met face to face. The team found that although the sites allowed contact with hundreds of acquaintances, as with conventional friendship networks, people tend to have around 5 close friends. Also, 90% of contacts that the subjects regarded as close friends were people they had met face to face. "People see face to face contact as being absolutely imperative in forming close friendships," added Dr Reader. He told the British Association Festival of Science in York that social networking sites allow people to broaden their list of nodding acquaintances because staying in touch online is easy. "What social network sites can do is decrease the cost of maintaining and forming these social networks because we can post information to multiple people," he said.

But to develop a real friendship we need to see that the other person is trustworthy. "We invest time and effort in them in the hope that sometime they will help us out. It is a kind of reciprocal relationship," said Dr Reader, "What we need is to be absolutely sure that a person is really going to invest in us, is really going to be there for us when we need them...It's very easy to be deceptive on the internet."

Câu 44: Which of the following could best describe the main idea of the passage?

- A. Social networking sites play important role in making true friends.
- B. Social networking sites help modern people to expand their friend list.
- C. Meeting their friends face-to-face is the best way to make close friends.

- A. With the help of social networking sites, people can have myriad acquaintances.
- B. Although the number of online friends is rather massive, each person only has some close friends.
- C. The number of online friends you can make on Facebook is more than that on MySpace.
- D. The number of friends we have in the real world is nearly as many as that on social networking sites.
