Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions from 39 to 43.

Within the last decade, social and biological researchers have discovered a specific link between music and emotional sensitivity. Music has a universal appeal. It has ability to make us feel a certain way, and to change how we are currently feeling. In fact, music is often said to be the language of emotion. The relationship between music and emotions is formed not only by man and sound, but also by the body and knowledge, individual taste and communities. How people experience music depends strongly on the historical context, society, and their habits. Moreover, one's family background and education also have impact on his enjoyment of music.

There are many ways to introduce music into a child's life. Singing and making rhythms in the early years are first steps in building a musical foundation. As children age, finding or creating opportunities to play an instrument or sing in a choir will continue to fire up those neurons resulting in both music appreciation and the added benefit of positive social and emotional brain forming.

Question 39. What is the passage mainly about?

- | | |
|--|---|
| A. Universal appeal of music | B. Music and human life |
| C. Social and biological research | D. The relationship between music and emotions |

Question 40. Which is not mentioned in paragraph 1 as something that affects the way people experience music?

- | | | | |
|------------------------------|-------------------|------------------|--------------------|
| A. historical context | B. society | C. habits | D. routines |
|------------------------------|-------------------|------------------|--------------------|

Question 41. The second paragraph refers to _____.

- | | |
|-----------------------------|--------------------------------------|
| A. introducing music | B. children's learning music |
| C. brain development | D. singing and making rhythms |

Question 42. The word their in paragraph 1 refers to _____.

- | | | | |
|-----------------|-----------------------|--------------------|------------------|
| A. music | B. communities | C. emotions | D. people |
|-----------------|-----------------------|--------------------|------------------|

Question 43. The word positive in paragraph 2 is closest in meaning to _____.

- A. bad B. good C. negative D. poor

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions from 44 to 50.

The decisions we make in our early life, e.g. what school we go to, the subjects we chose to study, the decision to go to university/college, the courses we choose, can impact our career path. If this decision is heavily swayed by parental preference, the child may end up following a vocation that, deep down, they are not interested in. At the same time, without practical guidance and support when pursuing interests, poor choices can be made.

Everyone has a unique set of skills and aptitudes. Each child is individual in their own way, and so may possess different skills and abilities to their parents. With this in mind, adopting a similar career role to either parent may not be the right course of action.

We all take time to ‘find our feet’. Parents will often say things such as “pick a course you think you’ll like” or “why don’t you apply for this job”. Though it may seem they are doing the right thing in terms of steering their children in the right direction, parents also need to understand that we all need space and time to discover what we truly want to pursue. University, for example, isn’t for everyone – and engaging in relevant work experience and/or undertaking an apprenticeship can be just as valuable in finding a suitable vocation in which you can thrive.

The trick here is to educate children that life is about self-discovery and new skills and talents are developed. How many of us are in careers we thought we would be in when we were 18? We can only make decisions based on what we know about ourselves at the time, take the pressure off of them by letting them know it's okay that they aren't sure what they want to do yet but the important thing is to be proactive in finding their way.
